Keywords

Types of entrepreneurs and entrepreneurship, theoretical perspectives on entrepreneurship, entrepreneurship worldwide, strategic entrepreneurship (base), legal aspects of entrepreneurship (base), financing of start-ups (base)

Position of the course

This course will provide an introduction to and positioning of entrepreneurship. First, the topic of entrepreneurship will be defined and an overview of types of entrepreneurship (academic entrepreneurship, social entrepreneurship,...) will be given. Further, a number of theoretical perspectives (resource dependency theory, effectuation/causation, social network theory) to the domain will be elaborated on. Students will be offered an overview of entrepreneurship worldwide and the most important facilitators and impediments to entrepreneurship. Cases will be used to make the student familiar with the domain and by using a business game a "real life" experience with entrepreneurship will be simulated. The course further provides the basis for a number of important subdomains in the field, namely: strategic entrepreneurship, legal aspects of entrepreneurship and financing of new ventures.
