Position of the course
raising students' awareness of the social functions of specific text genres, in a context of globalisation, digitalisation and multilingualism in Belgium terms like 'zerotaligheid' [zerolingualism], 'verfransing' [Frenchification], 'nieuwkomen' [newcomer], 'omgekeerde integratie' [reversed integration], 'taalverloedering' [language decay] and 'tussentaal' [intermediate language]: who uses them why, in which texts and with which effect? Do our ways of speaking and writing about language contribute to social inclusion and exclusion of speakers? Who determines what can be said about varieties and their speakers? What is the role of linguistics in these processes?
