Teaching languages
- Dutch

Keywords
- Introduction to historical research; bibliographies and databanks; critical apparatus; academic writing.

Position of the course
- This introductory course is intended to familiarize students with the basic skills necessary for independent historical research. This class interacts closely with the Practical History I courses (from among which each student must select one). The skills developed lay the groundwork for the various Practical History courses and, ultimately, the master’s thesis.

Contents
- Learning how to develop a good research question
- Learning how to develop a good search strategy via the use of printed and online bibliographies, repertories and databanks
- Learning how to develop an adequate critical apparatus (footnotes, source overview, and bibliography)
- Learning about scientific communication (reading and writing)
- Becoming familiar with archives and research libraries

Initial competences
- No specific prior knowledge is required. However, the students may be asked to take a preparatory exam in order to determine their own level.

Final competences
- Be able to formulate a research question

(Approved)
2 Be able to collect sources and literature in a scientifically valid fashion
3 Be able to put together a critical apparatus
4 Be able to write – in competent Dutch – abstracts and short reviews of scientific articles in Dutch and English
5 Know how archives and libraries function and be able to use them to obtain the right information

Conditions for credit contract
Access to this course unit via a credit contract is unrestricted: the student takes into consideration the conditions mentioned in ‘Starting Competences’

Conditions for exam contract
This course unit cannot be taken via an exam contract
