Position of the course

This course aims to familiarize students with the diverse initiatives and debates concerning the use of history and memory in state and society. It teaches students to think on an advanced level about the ethical, political and societal aspects and implications of diverse forms of popular and academic uses of the past. This course closely connects to the core competences of the bachelor in history.

Contents

This course makes use of two approaches to analyse the use of history and memory in
First we will focus on the primary societal spheres in which history and memory are constructed or used. Among those societal spheres and corresponding 'user' of history and memory we will focus on: the state (government and parliament), the judicial sphere, educational institutions, museum and memorials, media, political parties and religious groups, artists, the entertainment industry etc.

Second we will focus on different 'relations' in which people can engage with the past and different aims which can be strived for through these relations. We will discuss the following relations and aims among others: the past as a source of identity and legitimation; the past as entertainment of hobby; the past as heritage, asset or commodity; the past as a realm of injustice and the use of history in courts and tribunals, the past as an object of therapy and reconciliation; the past as a teacher of life and the search for historical analogies; the past as an object of religious or ritual practices and discourses.

Initial competences
