Position of the course

This advanced course is a general course within the archaeology master. It builds on the competencies obtained in the archaeology bachelor and further elaborates on several concepts from 'General introduction to Archeology'.

This course is part of a duo with Projectmanagement. In case that only one course is to be taken, Archaeology, legislation, and management has to be chosen first Archeology as part of the society (legislative and executive policy, ethics, use and abuse).

Contents

* History of archeology in Belgium, structures and institutions within the national archeology and internationally,

* overview and discussion of legislative measures (Flemish legislation, Valletta Convention, legislation in Wallonia, Brussels the Netherlands, France, England, World Heritage Convention, ...).

External actors in the archaeological world come to explain their views on archeology and their role in it (Flanders, but also other areas can be discussed).

The language of this course is Dutch, but some lessons can be given in English or French.

Initial competences

This course builds on certain final competences of the bachelor program in archeology. At least passive knowledge of English and French is assumed to consult professional literature.
