Position of the course

Give students an understanding of the dominant evolutions in the fields of international banking, international financial flows, and the determinants of the growth of financial centres. Special attention will be given to Central and Eastern Europe.

The program aims at training and educating students who are able to recognise and analyse problems of a financial-economic nature, based on the current state of the scientific literature.

Contents

International financial crises and twin crises:

- 1 Anatomy of international financial crises, 'twin crises' and Eurocrisis
- 2 Causes and consequences
- 3 Theoretical framework
- 4 Possible solutions
- 5 Role for national and international financial architecture

6 Other aspects of international financial crises with cases

Initial competences

A thorough knowledge of international financial economics and banking are required. This course is therefore builds on other courses, such as Macroeconomics, Monetary Economics, Banking and Finance.

Final competences

- 1 To understand and analyse causes and consequences of financial crises in a scientifically sound way, with the use of real world data and the appropriate statistical and econometric techniques.
- 2 To assess independently the risk of a crisis in a certain country or bank and to solve a possible crisis in a creative but consistent manner with a team.
- 3 To report about these issues in a critical, scientifically sound yet comprehensible manner, both orally and written.
